Q: 'Copy to' not saving documents correctly, they are shown as newly created I'm using Windows 7 and the new Windows 8.1 Metro interface. I've got a file open in Notepad, which gets copied to a folder using Windows Explorer 'Copy to'. This happens on a regular basis. When I open the folder, the file is present. However, I can't open it in Notepad. Notepad says "Notepad doesn't recognize this extension.". I copied the file from a Windows 7 computer without a problem. Is there any way to save a 'Copy to' file? Maybe a solution with the Explorer? A: This is most likely caused by the copy being saved as a read only version. It should be saved as an editable version. You should be able to right click and select "open with" in windows explorer. It should then be able to open in notepad without any problems. Criminal charges against a poor homeless woman on Vancouver's West Side will be dropped in the face of a U.S. extradition request, according to the B.C. Supreme Court. In a decision made in March, Justice Susan Griffin dismissed the charges against Katherine "Katie" Knill and said she was "bound by the extradition procedures provided by the Extradition Act." In February 2015, Knill was found to be in violation of her probation in the U.S. and sent back to B.C. as she sat in court. Knill was arrested later that month at her residential hotel on Victoria Drive. Court heard that Knill is mentally impaired and has a history of schizophrenia. She was schizophrenic when she was convicted of shoplifting in 2013. An extradition hearing will take place next, but it is likely that the U.S. charges will be dropped, but not the Canadian ones. In a recent interview with CBC News, Knill said she wants to go to school but cannot go back to jail. "It is a huge relief. I'm excited about going to school and, of course, getting the education I need to be able to get my life back in order," she said. "I need to get my life back together, so I'm just going to put it all together. Everything is going to come together." Knill's Canadian lawyer, Brian Butler, disagrees with the decision

Lines in the Sand - what nation can survive Brexit? Commenced by Jeremy Corbyn in his keynote speech today, who claimed that Brexit was about more than just trade, the initiative will attempt to expose the EU's many injustices in a bid to persuade more voters across the continent to favour a remain outcome in the upcoming referendum. The initiative will follow a similar agenda to the One Nation campaign that was successfully waged by the SNP in the Scottish independence referendum. The underlying message is that although people say they want to leave the EU, voters from all strands of opinion actually believe that they have the option to reverse this decision and that their democracy is being undermined by the European Union. One Nation has been extremely successful in the Scottish referendum, as well as in other former colonies, and in theory the same approach could be taken to the EU. While Jeremy Corbyn and others have argued that there is a 'Green New Deal' - to 'cure' climate change - within the European community, the SNP have also argued that there is a 'grey deal' to use up the deficit in the EU budget and that this is why the EU stands in the way of a green deal. If this is true, it begs the question about how vital it is for all of us to leave the EU. If the UK leaves the EU and then comes back into the EU in the near future, we should expect much more of a green deal from the EU and also much less of an increase in the EU budget. Removing the EU's handbrake would actually be a very good thing, and we should be talking about this with a positive, optimistic mentality rather than how all the issues in the EU are due to its democratic deficit. After a team of academic researchers found a bug in the Android operating system that could allow for an almost unfettered root access, one of the researchers, Cody Wiegler, decided to release the complete source code for the attack he developed, titled "DroidDream." The DroidDream attack only works against rooted devices, but at its core, DroidDream is a type of vulnerability that exploits Android's native permissions system. This means that if an app is granted certain capabilities (like using the camera) in its manifest (an Android data file that specifies various permissions, settings, and capabilities), then the app can also theoretically perform those same tasks (in this case, as a type of "
